Forty Incendiary Fires in the Space of Five Months.

A tenorier of THE EVENING WORLD who came there yesterday found the people in a state of great excitement.

Within the past few days there have been cleven fires in rapid succession.

He works speedily and quietly.

For instance, last Monday night at 10.30 o'clock, fire was discovered in the tin shop of the J. M. Ives Co., on Main street, just beond the Housatonic passenger station. It was discovered so quickly that the fire men were summoned in time to extinguish i with little difficulty. Then the Fire Marshal made an investiga-tion and found, as was suspected, that some one had deliberately set the place on fire. MARKS OF OILY PINGERS.

Marks of oily fingers were found on a win-dow frame, through which "Jack" evidently male his escape after firing the building. Inside a pile of rubbish was found soaked with oil, and the wails were also wet down with the inflammable liquid. In another room a load of oil waste was found which would have burned like a streak of lightning had the flames once reached it.

If they had nothing could have saved the entire building from destruction.

FIRE BELLS AGAIN. Scarcely had the firemen extinguished the first blaze, when the bells tolled the signal of another fire.

Indeed the weary firemen had not reached their hendquarters when they were recalled to the locarity they had just leit. This time the fire was in the rear of the old andury House which stands within two

Again the firemen returned to their head-quarters and scarted to wash their machines. flurdly had they finished when a third alarm of fire set them swearing and houng that 'Jack the Firebug' would some day drop into a furnace of his own making and be burned to death. This was the biggest fire of the night. It started in Bryan & Dexter's hat shop on ceasfully started a big fire, and although many people have heard the shots no one has ever seen the man who pulled the trigger.

The hat factory burned for three hours and its a total loss. The damage is covered by insurance, and three companies are hard bit to the extent of $20,000 or $25,000 between them.

AN EXPLOSION FEARED.

AN EXPLOSION FEARED.

The factory was very near the gas works, and at one time it was feared would explode the gas in the big tanks.

In such an event the loss of life would have been terrible, and the entire town would probably have been destroyed.

Recognizing the danger, the firemen abandoned the hat factory and devoted their best efforts to keep the fire from the gas works.

They succeeded, but only by dint of work which should make them famous.

Even the famous force of fire-fighters in Gotham could not have shown more bravery and energy than did these men on the brink of a volcano, when a flying spark falling in a gas tank would have caused an explosion that would undoubtedly have blown them out of existence at any rate. Their coolness and courage saved the city.

They were ably assisted by the police. About two hundred hands were employed in the hat factory, and they will find it difficult to find other situations at this season of the year.

The proprietors of the factory are so much annoyed by the fire that they are thinking of annoyed by the fire that they are thinking of a some other locality. moving their factory to some other locality. Although their stock and building was insured, they lose largely on contracts which they had to fill.

They put out the fire with much difficulty.

Armed guards patrolled the streets after that until daylight and business was resumed. To say that the people are enraged is putting it mildly. Although several private detectives, in addition to the regular local men, have been on the watch for Jack for months, they have accomplished nothing. The Common Council called a special meeting on Tuesday and decided to send to New York for detectives to ferret out the fire fiend. Jack started three fires in one night, one of which caused a loss of $29,000. Since then he has kept quiet, but that was only three nights ago, and it is expected that he will be at work again soon.

The insurance companies are very chary of taking risks, and the local police are falling into disrepute owing to their failure to catch the miscreant.

He works speedily and quietly.

Not satisfied with these three fires.' Jack' star ed another one, and the fortieth of the series, about 4 o'clock on Tuesday morning. Every one in town, wearied after the review of the Opera-House.

"That man struck me as being the living semblance of Hyde, Dr. Jekyll's evil spirit.

"The weather was cool and he wore a long kind of brown-colored coat, and was stooping ble and looking behind him. He had a soft hat pulled well down over his eyes, and there was a look that was fiendish in its expression on his face.

"He made a noise that was neither a laugh nor a snarl, but a combination of both, with everything ele you can think. He did not seem to hear me until I was close to him.

"I wish now I had followed the fiend when I met him," concluded Mr. Price.

IS THE PIEND INSANE? The people believe Jack is crazy. The people believe Jack is crazy.

They say that no man in his sane senses would takes the risks he does. He is bound to be captured sconer or later if he continues, and if he is caught red-handed Lord only knows what the euraged people will do with him. Rope and post are handy things in Danbury, and The Evening World reporter had heard more than one man say that hanging is too good for the wretch.

The police are at their wits end to know what to do.

THE POLICE WORK HARD. The Chief has spared no expense and has worked indefatigably to effect the capture of the infernal firebug, but so far without avail. PERHAPS A DAND OF THIEVES.

Last Saturday evening, while hobbling home with the assistance of a heavy cane, he was halted by Dr. Taylor, who resides at a hand-some house at 317 Linn street.

The doctor led Steele into his office, where he injected a portion of the Brown-Sequard elixir in each hip without Steele knowing what it was MR. BONNER BELIEVES HIS BEAUTY CAN what it was.

Steele suffered intense agony, but was told he would soon get well.

The agony was so great that on Monday he called on Dr. Taylor, who told him the more pain he had the more complete would be his final recovery.

Yesterday Steele sent for Dr. Watson, of John street. Dr. Watson says, "I found the inside of both of Steele's thighs terribly inflamed, swolen and in a mottled condition, as if gangrene had set in though it may prove only blood poisoning. That is bad enough, however, and may cause the man's death.

"His high fever and nulse show blood poisoning and I believe his mind has been unbalanced.

unbalanced.

"It is the most inexcusable outrage I have ever known to be committed in medicine, and I would cheerfully take the witness stand against the man who perpetrated it."

To-day Steele's friends retained an attorney to sue Dr. Taylor for heavy damages.

When the Cterk called Eben S. Allen's name at 11.26 A. M. every head turned towards the prisoners' pen in the rear of the Court of General Sessions. Lawyer John S. Eustis was walking down the aisle, followed by a middle-sized, somewhat distinguished-looking man in a blue cheviot sack-coat and trousers. They ranged themselves at the bar, and Judge Gildersleeve asked the prisoner: 'What have you to say why sentence should not be passed upon you?" The large lustrous eyes of Allen looked

The large lustrous eyes of Allen looked steadily through the glasses of his pincr-ner at the judge as he propounded this conventional question, and then he turned his head towards his counsel for him to reply.

Mr. Eus is replied: 'I have nothing to add. Your Honor, to what has already been laid before you.'

'Mr. Allen,' said Judge Gildersleeve, in his unctions impressive tones, 'you have pleaded guilty to the charges that have been made against you. I understand from the District Attorney that there were others that could have been preferred and were not. The punishment you will receive under the two counts of the indictment will be the whole that will come to you.

I have read many letters from relatives and friends, and have heard them speak in your behalf. After a very careful consideration of the whole matter,' and the Judge laid great stress on the word very, 'taking into account the other charges that could have been brought, I do not see why you should not receive the full penalty of the law for your offense.
